Bond advisors say annex dispute may stall issue

A major stumbling block which could stall issuance this fall of any bonds for expansion of Canyon schools emerged this week, the News has learned.

Bob Davis of Columbian Securities Corporation, hired Tuesday night as financial advisor to the Canyon school board for the anticipated November bond election, confirmed that a still unsettled dispute between the Canyon district and petitioners in the Glendale subdivision in South Amarillo must be settled before bonds can be issued.

Davis quoted his firm's bond attornies in Dallas as saying the Attorney General, who must okay school bond issues, will not give that approval until the dispute is worked out.

According to Davis' attornies, the school district is considered in litigation over the disputed 160 acres of Glendale subdivision land "and that means until the litigation is settled the Attorney General would not approve any bonds."

If the Attorney General does, in fact, decline to approve a bond issue this fall until the litigation is settled, that fact in itself could force the Canyon school board to drop further appeals of a November 1974 county school trustee decision allowing the Amarillo School District to annex the 160-acre subdivision.

The Canyon board appealed the county board ruling to the Texas Commissioner of Education and argued their case before a commissioner representative last January.

The commissioner has yet to render an opinion on the appeal.

School Attorney Elton Cox said Friday he has heard no word from Austin indicating when the state commissioner might render a verdict on the appeal.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs likewise has heard nothing on a time frame for the decision to be rendered.

Davis indicated that the local school board could call a bond election for this fall to determine whether bonds will be issued to pay for the construction of new schools or expansion of current facilities but the bonds could not be issued until the litigation or pending appeals are settled.

Both the local school board and the county board have the right to appeal the Texas Education Commissioner's decision on the initial appeal. The next appellant jurisdiction is the Texas Education Commission itself.

Both parties also have the right to appeal a commission decision to the district court in Austin.

The stumbling block revealed by Davis last week is just one of several which face the Canyon board as it attempts to finance new schools.

Davis told a citizens committee studying the financing of school expansion here a week ago that with the school district's current tax valuation the Attorney General would not approve an issue of more than $4.5 million for new school construction.

He advised local board members to act next summer to raise the valuations either through a total revaluation of property or by raising the percentage of valuation charged in the district's tax formula. Currently taxes are charged on 40 per cent of the 100 per cent property valuation.

In the past, school board members have discussed the possibility of calling a bond election in November.

They have also received tentative architectural estimates which indicate a bond issue of between $5 million and $6 million would be needed to finance construction of a new elementary school and a new senior high school.

Even with tax hike, initial county budget in red

Even with a 33 per cent tax increase passed earlier this summer, initial budget figures project a deficit budget for 1976, Randall County Auditor Betty Hodges told county commissioners Friday.

Commissioners voted to postpone discussion of the preliminary budget worked up by Mrs. Hodges until Sept. 8, but she warned them her figures will need cutting by about $45,000 if the county is to fill a balanced budget for the next fiscal year.

"There's not enough money there to begin with," Mrs. Hodges said. "It will have to be cut some more if it is to be balanced this year."

"Unless we do deficit spending," said Commissioner Dee Griffin Sr.

Mrs. Hodges said the county will begin 1976 with a projected surplus of about $104,000.

She said she had already cut some budget requests from county department heads to fit the expenditures into the estimated revenues for 1976.

The preliminary budget presented by Mrs. Hodges projects income of $1,717,051 for the coming year and expenditures of $1,762,770.

County commissioners, anticipating the demand for more funds for 1976, acted in July to raise ad valorem taxes by 33 per cent and figured at that time they would have an adequate balance with the income generated by that tax increase.

They raised taxes from $1.05 per $100 on 17 per cent of valuation to 95 cents per $100 on 25 per cent of valuation.

The $1.7 million budget initially worked out by Mrs. Hodges is about $200,000 more than reflected in the amended 1975 budget.

She anticipates revenue during 1975 of $1,463,000 and expenditures of $1,507,490.

The tax hike voted by commissioners will bring an additional $270,000 into county coffers for 1976.

Ad valorem taxes are estimated for the coming year to provide income of $893,000. Automobile registration taxes and fees of office charged by various county officials should add the remainder of the $1.7 million in revenue for the new year.

The preliminary expenditure budget indicates major increases in expenses in most county offices and in the interest and sinking fund for the county.

An anticipated increase of about $40,000 is allocated to the tax collector-assessor for 1976 over the 1975 amended budget estimate. Tax office operations are expected to cost about $263,000 for the year.

A $24,000 increase is allocated to the district attorney's office for the year with expenses expected to total $96,000 as compared to the amended 1975 estimate of expenditures of $72,800.

The interest and sinking fund has been increased to $101,800 from a 1975 total of $67,000. The increase is due to certificates of

WT enrollment on increase

Enrollment for the fall term at West Texas State University was up by almost 300 as of Saturday afternoon, according to Registrar Dr. Donald Cates.

Cates said 5554 students had registered for classes through the first two days of regular registration.

That figure compares with 5278 who registered during the same period in 1974.

The figure is still about 1000 short of an enrollment Cates speculated might come to about 6800 this fall.

Late registration, however, continues through this week.

Enrollment at the 12th class day in 1974 totaled 6645, which was an increase over the same period in 1973.

The enrollment figures indicate the upward trend is continuing for student numbers at the Canyon campus.

Late registration will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily through Friday and from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday in the registrar's office.

Classes begin Tuesday.

A wide variety of daytime and evening classes are still available.

Trustees talk petition status

County school trustees Thursday questioned whether the fact that a majority of the residents signing a petition to have their Glendale subdivision annexed by the Amarillo school district have moved or plan to move from the tract will impact on a decision still pending on the issue in Austin.

Trustee Charles Purcell, who last November voted against allowing the subdivision to be annexed by the Amarillo district from the Canyon district, asked County Judge Woody Pond during a Thursday session about the effect of the new information.

A Canyon News article published Aug. 24 quoted Mrs. Mary Jensen of 6005 Shawnee in the Glendale subdivision as saying two of five original petitioners for annexation have already moved from the subdivision and that she plans to move from the area as soon as she can sell her home.

Should Mrs. Jensen move to Oklahoma as planned, the only original petitioners remaining in the subdivision would be the Ron Fines and Jack Sebastians. Neither family has any children.

Mrs. Jensen told the News only two school-age children now live in the subdivision — her child and a third-grade girl, daughter of the Richard Hadleys, who did not live in the subdivision at the time of the original petition.

The Canyon school board has appealed a decision made last November by the county board allowing the subdivision to be annexed by the Amarillo school district. A ruling on the appeal is pending with the Texas Education Commissioner in Austin.

"Is the board aware of this change in the petition?" Purcell asked Thursday.

Trustee J.D. Barker said it is his opinion the change in the petition would have no effect on the possible ruling from the education commissioner.

(School District Attorney Elton Cox told the News later in the day Thursday he, too, believes the commissioner will rule on the petition as originally submitted rather than in light of the charge in the petitioners' subdivision.)

Pond, who is ex-officio county school superintendent, said he has heard no word on when the education commissioner will issue his decision on the Canyon board appeal.

In other business Thursday, the board approved a budget for the coming year of $5400, funding for which will be requested from the state.

The budget includes a $2580 annual salary for Pond and a $2580 salary for Chris Thomas, assistant ex-officio county school superintendent.

Mrs. Thomas noted the trustees made $615 on investment of

Canyon chamber to discuss issue, too

Amarillo chamber backs ASD annex bid

Directors of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce last week called on the Canyon school district to give up to Amarillo about 11 sections of land in southwest Amarillo.

The directors passed a formal resolution asking for the two school boards to come together to discuss the situation.

The text of the resolution:

"We recommend that a decision be reached to finalize the school boundary question between the Amarillo and Canyon school districts on 11 sections of land west of Interstate 27 and south of Interstate 40.

"We believe it is in the best interests of both communities that urban growth areas of Amarillo be in the Amarillo school district.

"The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce feels this area will continue to grow and proper services must be afforded to incoming families.

"We have confidence in the school systems of both communities but in the best interests of the citizens of both communities and to the benefit of the investors in their ventures the matter needs solidifying."

Brac Biggers, president of the chamber, said the resolution was recommended for adoption by a committee he appointed to study the issue last May.

Biggers said it was determined that development of the 11 sections of land into housing areas would prove to be "a tremendous burden on Canyon to take this load," and if the area were retained in the Canyon school district residents would have to send their children quite a distance into Canyon for schools.

Biggers said the committee also determined that residential areas developing to the southwest of Amarillo would require several new schools and could not be expected to pay enough taxes to cover the costs of new facilities.

"You have a tax deficit picture in a residential area and somebody in Canyon is going to have to pick up the bill," he said.

In addition, Biggers cited the general growth trend for Amarillo is to the southwest and that "Amarillo needs the growing room."

He indicated that the fact the land is in the Canyon district is inhibiting development of several sections of land to the southwest of Amarillo.

The Amarillo board's mention of the transfer of 11 sections of land to the Amarillo district from Canyon is the first mention of a transaction involving that much acreage since Canyon and Amarillo school boards met over a similar proposition two years ago.

The Canyon board indicated at that time they would not be interested in such a transfer.

Land developers and builders in recent weeks have called for a resolution of the school lands dispute.

Weldon Trice, president of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, said his directors will meet Sept. 8 to discuss the Amarillo board's action.

Two Vietnamese among students enrolling for fall classes at WT

Two Vietnamese refugees will be among the about 40 foreign students attending West Texas State University this fall.

Registrar Donald Cates said Dung Trinh Phoung, who now lives in Spearman, and Bich Nhu, who lives near Friona, will be beginning freshmen as classes open Tuesday.

Both escaped their besieged country in its waning hours last spring.

Miss Phoung, who was an exchange student four years ago at Spearman High School, will major in journalism at the university.

She graduated from Spearman High in 1971 and then returned to her family in Vietnam, Cates said. He said she was air-lifted back to the United States last spring as a part of the American effort to remove refugees from the communist take-over there.

She is living with the R.L. Uptergroves of Spearman.

Cates said Nhu lives with his family on a farm near Friona and has yet to decide on a college major.

He said Nhu managed to salvage only one page of his public school transcript for the journey to the United States.

Under new federal legislation, Vietnamese refugees attending American colleges are eligible for student financial aid, Cates said, and that aid should help Nhu and Miss Phoung.

But, new state legislation passed last spring requires that they pay about $700 per semester tuition.

Year-round school eyed by finance committee

Year-around school for Canyon students might or might not save tax money, but there are other concerns as well, members of the Committee for Sound Financing were told Thursday night.

A preliminary report from a subcommittee studying year-round school, double daily sessions and extended day sessions indicates there are major problems in almost every school area, including finances, in the year-around school approach.

Junior High Principal Dave Corley presented his initial findings to the school-board-created committee which is studying the possibility of financing a bond issue for construction of new schools in the Canyon district.

"Too many people initially or too readily accept that a year-round school operation will reduce the district budget," Corley's report states. "A voluntary plan (one which allows students to decide which of four quarters they will attend school) poses the opposite. A mandatory program (one which allows administrators to mandate which of the four quarters the students will attend) might cause a holding of costs. Time, success, proper planning, effective implementation, prudent scheduling, legislative change and community acceptance may or may not bring about cost savings in one area of the budget, or increase cost in instructional areas while not reducing capital outlay expenditures."

Corley outlined 16 major concerns to his subcommittee in studying the possibility of operating Canyon schools the full 12 months of the year. Under such a program, students would attend three of four quarters.

"Greater use of facilities is about the only advantage of year-round education," Corley's report says.

However, the fact that for high school students vacation time could come at any quarter of the year might have the effect of reducing the potential traditional summer job market.

Related costs are also of concern, the report says.

"Even with the very best efforts, especially so in a voluntary program, the cost per pupil in a year-round program will increase," the report states. "Less concern for pupil-teacher class ratio results in increases. Logis-

Beware tendency to overbuild schools

Beware the prevailing psychology of the Canyon school board.

Based on the premise that small schools are better, the local board has proceded during the last year in reasoning through to a conclusion that at least two new school buildings are needed to provide room for our expanding school populations.

Because of their premise, they have ignored the possibility of expansion of current schools to meet the needs of higher student numbers.

Two citizens committees now examining the need for new schools here and possible financing for new schools have become infected with the school board's feeling that small schools are desirable.

We wonder if Canyon is not reaching a point — of tax saturation if nothing else — when the board's philosophy, while possibly desirable in an ideal situation, may not cost more than it's worth.

No figures have been worked up and no architectural plans have been drawn to show how much it might cost local taxpayers to, for example, add a wing at the high school and add a wing at Gene Howe Elementary School, the two schools which seem to be experiencing the most growing pains.

But, it might logically be considered that addition of a wing to the schools would not be nearly as costly as construction of two totally new school plants.

In an addition, for example, there would be no demand for additional athletic facilities or cafeteria or auditorium or central offices.

Likewise, initial cost of two new buildings might prove to be the most negligible part of the long-term cost of new schools. Operation of two new schools, with total staffing, new administrators, coaches and teachers, cafeteria help, secretaries, and so on, will be high.

Expansion of present facilities might at least reduce the number of staff members required.

Rather than defending succinctly their premise that small schools are better than large ones, the board has taken the premise as an intuitive fact.

But, the premise is questionable.

How, exactly, will instruction degenerate in a larger school? The answer is evasive, particularly for those who themselves attended large schools and consider their education adequate.

The economics of the situation demand that, rather than blindly accepting the board's premise, the board itself and the two citizen committees examine at length the possibility of expansion of present facilities as an alternative to a tax-bloating two-building construction program.—C.W.

The problem with American equality

BY CARROLL WILSON

The evidence mounts that Alexis De Tocqueville was right two centuries ago when he wrote in his "Democracy in America," that . . .

"A manly and lawful passion for equality . . . tends to elevate the humble to the rank of the great; but there exists also in the human heart a depraved taste for equality, which impels the weak to attempt to lower the powerful to their own level and reduces men to prefer equality in slavery to inequality in freedom."

If Darwin's natural selection is a scientific truth, and many accept it as such, and if it applies to man as it applies to others in the animal kingdom, De Tocqueville's prediction is a pretty good assessment of the nature of man.

Because if man must be compelled in life to avoid death, to survive, he will, as Hobbes avers, do that which is in his own best interest, that which will assure his survival.

It can be argued, then, that it is in the definite best interest of the weak, to protect their survival, to bring down the strong, to change the direction of the Darwinian concept of survival of the fittest, to altar the course of human nature, to survive at the lowest level, but to survive.

Not that there's anything wrong with tampering with what Darwin would describe as a natural law.

But, should that tampering with the social system simply speed on course the weak in their efforts to topple the strong for an existence in the swamp of mediocrity? Or should it work the other way, elevating the weak as much as possible, while restraining the strong? Or should the system work freely, allowing the strong to produce at a level of quality and efficiency, providing leadership and innovation, restraining its own urges to step-on the weak from a position of self-interest?

What, then, of this business of assuring equality to all Americans?

For starters, it should be noted that Darwinian natural selection, as a biological process, is directly opposed to the currently chic concept of equal opportunity.

That all men are created equal is simply not true from a Darwinian standpoint. And, empirical evidence tends to add support to this statement.

Nevertheless, Americans have during this century purchased the concept that all men are, by natural right, entitled to equal opportunities. Apparently, the concept has been paid for through a loss in quality, in innovation, in motivation and in a quantitative diminishment of most of those things by which a civilized society is measured.

Caspar W. Weinberger, who resigned recently as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, sounded a loud warning note about the course American tampering with the nature of man is taking.

Weinberger warned:

"Our country was built by people of energy, daring, and ingenuity — the Edisons, the Wright brothers, the Helen Kellers, the Fultons, the Carnegies, the great musicians and artists, and countless others brimming with dreams and filled with the courage to reach out and realize those dreams whatever the odds.

"Their kind of daring was nurtured in a social climate that rewarded risk takers and practical visionaries. If we now proceed mindlessly to change that climate to one favoring a faceless gray agalitarianism, we will have lost all that has made America great and enabled us to help so much of the world.

"The real social agenda of America, still unfinished, is to discover and reward excellence wherever we find it — under a black skin, a white skin, in a female or male, in a Catholic, a Jew, a Protestant, or an agnostic. That is the real purpose of equal opportunity."

Weinberger warns that what we have constructed, that structure which tampers with the basis of man's motivation, rests on a foundation of false promises, yet grows to unimaginable volume and height with the federal government assuming more and more the course of the tampering.

"My single overriding observation after these years in Washington is of the growing danger of an all-pervasive Federal Government," Weinberger warns in his farewell address. "Unless checked, that growth may take from us our most precious personal freedoms."

A recent article in U.S. News and World Report outlines the programs initiated by the federal government in recent years to force equality or equal opportunity.

The magazine reports that more and more tax money is being used to shift income from middle and upper income classes to the poor.

Money, in essence, has become the big equalizer.

Federal programs to administer more and more money to provide more and more equality are simply not in tune with the natural proclivities of man — those proclivities explained succinctly by De Tocqueville. The weak are given every opportunity under the present system, based as it is on poor reasoning and no empirical proof, to bring down the strong. The swamp is becoming overcrowded.

Frankly, it is neither possible nor desirable to eliminate all inequalities among humans. Although it is charitable and prudent to take reasonable measures to temper extremes of inequality, the obsessive attempt to eliminate inequalities by social reforms and sanctions provokes bitterness, disorder and can only substitute new inequalities for old ones.

In effect, the current federal dash toward equality is working to deny that which would afford true equal opportunity. Equal opportunity can be assured only in a society in which upward mobility is allowed.

A governmental system which tends to mass humanity on an equal plane reduces freedoms concurrently and stifles any ability to move upward within the system. This is true by definition.

It is, one could argue, impossible to eliminate hierarchies and distinctions. A large number of groupings, distinctions, rational and non-rational, contributes to the variety and richness of civilization and should be welcomed. As Madison noted two centuries ago, variety and distinction also assures that the government which so tenuously perches on the pillar of common consent will perform as designed, will be responsive and responsible.

Social stratification, then, is fine as long as there is mobility within the society. If the ambitious and intelligent person can move up, the society is workable. It becomes unworkable when mobility is denied and when struggle for the upward grind is removed.

To remove struggle from life is to deprive the individual of the laboratory that develops character, a laboratory wherein the ingredients are self-reliance, sense of duty and responsibility, initiative, ambition, thrift. The zest for living, the real enjoyment that comes from achieving goals, is denied the man caught in an egalitarian social system.

Once caught in such a system, the man of character will be the dissident, the problem, the hell-raiser.

And, men of character will have to be dealt with by the social system to ensure that the egalitarian base is retained in the gray, the faceless, the unmotivated mass.

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, a man of character so enamoured of freedom his very presence threatened the Soviet social structure, is himself a mute testimony to this fact.

In striving to achieve the classless society, the Soviets have progressed along the course we in America follow. We differ only in degree.

In a recent address to the AFL-CIO, Solzhenitsen told bluntly what life is worth in the Soviet Union:

"We are slaves there from birth. We are born slaves. I'm not young any more, and I myself was born a slave; this is even more true for those who are younger. We are slaves but we are striving for freedom. . ."

If we, too, are not be enslaved by false promises, we must change more than our governmental system. We must examine our beliefs. Then, we must examine whether the governmental system erected to provide equality meshes, in fact, with what we know to be true.

The Bible and long hair

BY ANN BROWN

In the August 17 edition of The Canyon Sunday News there was a well-written letter that expressed accurately the average junior-high school viewpoint on the hair controversy.

The young lady wisely withheld her name.

Parents, faculty, and school board members have a few advantages and responsibilities that junior high school students cannot possibly comprehend.

For one thing, the adults have been teenagers, so they can understand the student viewpoint. Students have never been adults, so they cannot understand the adult viewpoint or appreciate their responsibilities.

The teachers are responsible to the parents, and to the taxpayers who pay their salaries. And the board members are accountable to the citizens who elected them. Neither can afford the luxury of personal opinions that students enjoy.

The majority of Canyon parents are probably delighted that the school board requires a neat dress code, and that the teachers enforce it. It helps parents cope with the peer pressure on their children.

People who question that attire affects attitude should put on beautiful formal clothes, and try lounging on the floor.

If schools left all decisions to the students, few of them would attend school — or do anything else worth while.

Children are like gardens: They must be carefully tended if they are to produce flowers. Left to their own devices, gardens produce only weeds.

But adults should be careful to water the "flowers" in children instead of the "weeds." Students respond so much better to positive incentives than they do negative ones.

The young lady is correct in decrying such a furor over hair length. But did the boys raise the issue with their shaggy hair, or did the school board create the problem with the decree to cut it?

The majority of productive Americans react negatively to long hair on males — especially on their face.

If they realized shaggy hair evoked emotions varying from annoyance and irritation to disgust in most of the people who provide the physical, emotional, academic, and spiritual food for the Country, and those who keep the wheels of industry turning, the ones who respect the feelings of others would trim up.

It's true that a few men in Bible times never cut their hair or beards; it was a symbol of total dedication to God. Anyone who is dedicated to God respects his fellowman also.

The Bible is not silent, however, relative to hair styles. I Cor. 11:14-15 makes it quite plain that male and female hair lengths should differ. It recommends it be reasonably long on women, and short on men.

Paul hastened to add that if there was contention over hair styles, the church should not enter into the controversy (I Cor. 11:16).

In I Cor. 8:13, Paul gave the key to the whole problem. If we love others, we do not want to offend or hurt them, or do anything to add to their burdens in any way.

School board members probably care little if at all personally about the way students wear their hair. They are charged, however, with the responsibility of keeping peace between the offenders and the offended.

There is little that people offended by the appearance of others can do except keep quiet — which they generally do.

The Bible does recommend, however, that we be clean and neat (Ecc. 9:8). Who could object to that?

Letters to the editor

Wilson view flips her ulcer

Dear Mr. Wilson:

You have done it again. I suspect that Dr. Dudley Moore looks forward to those editorials concerning his attitudes for his weekly belly laugh, but you flip-flop my ulcer every time you come up with your comments on the affairs of the Canyon school system.

Thank goodness we have an administration which realizes the necessity of a prevailing atmosphere of discipline in the schools. Ideally, perhaps, hair lengths and skirt lengths and all of that should have nothing to do with education, agreed. But these things often do affect the atmosphere of learning particularly in the teenager because it is not the hair or skirt but the attitude of the "offender," an attitude of defiance of adult authority. As is so often the case, the innocent must suffer too many laws because some individuals lack self-control in their attitudes and actions. If you've ever worked with young people, Mr. Wilson, you know that most are reasonable and communicative and need very few rules to function productively; but there are others who simply stand against all rules, fair or otherwise. Isn't this also a truth of society? And isn't it interesting that the law breaker is the first to scream about rights when he is confronted with his offenses?

For a moment, lay education of minds aside and think simply of people and dress and behavior. You will agree that without controls, whatever the form, there is chaos. Whether you agree or not people's appearance has a great deal to do with their behavior. If you don't believe me, ask the nearest coach to comment on how much the apparel of his team members influences their actions. There is simply something about the degree of formality of appearance that does set modes of behavior in people. Just observe people once in a while.

You may be sure that discipline has a great deal to do with education. There can simply be no school without some good, enforced regulations. The thing about rules is that in order to work, they must be equal both in text and enforcement. Apparently, that is an area in which Canyon schools cannot be faulted. Of course a positive approach to discipline is preferable and ideal; but, Mr. Wilson, all young people are not ideal and in the end we still have to have school down there in those buildings. Our administration, I believe, is realistic enough to realize that sometimes negative reinforcement is the only thing which finally works with some children.

To deal finally with your comment that a child's appearance is the parent's domain. True, true. But some parents lost the upper hand almost before they began and are glad the school raises their children toward productive maturity. Then some parents have no more respect for regulations than do their offspring. It's the school though which must contend with the children day after day. Basically and ideally the goal of our educational system is to help people successfully exist in the American society and to become productive, mentally secure, communicating children as well as adults. Ours is a society built on rules — granted the fewer the better — and not anarchy and chaos. I believe that the faculty and administration of Canyon schools are truly trying to meet these goals. I am thankful to know that my children are taught self-control through a fair and firm system of discipline at school, often more successfully than they get at home.

Believe me, every parent in the Canyon district is invited and encouraged to get to know his school. A bit of communication could solve so many problems and many more parents might come to realize how very fortunate we are to have teachers and administrators who really care about children.

Yours most sincerely,
Sandy Morgan

Dear Sir:

We would like to relate the following events to you: Our first camping trip began unevently on July 24. While in Colorado, on a mountain, my wife fell and broke her right leg. Because of this event, we decided to begin our trip home the next day. Twenty-four hours after the accident, our car decided to share the spotlight and it broke down; this caused us an unexpected delay of two and one-half days.

Finally, we reached Amarillo on August 5. When we arrived it was dark. We were very tired and decided not to camp. Because of a convention, there were no rooms available. Hoping to find lodging, we drove to Canyon.

As we approached the third motel in Canyon, the wheel of our rented camper-trailer fell off! I had no jack that would adequately raise the camper. It was midnight, my wife was on crutches with a plaster cast and our two children were very upset. No one stopped to help at the time. I crossed the expressway to a small grocery store that happened to still be open. Two men were there and I explained my predicament to them. One of them loaned me a hydraulic jack, but it would not hold the frame. Then this same gentleman came to look at our camper which was resting at a bad angle (because it was supported by only one wheel).

This kind man said that he had a piece of farm equipment that might be helpful. Imagine our amazement when he arrived from some three blocks away with a beautiful yellow front-end loader. With this equipment, he gently lifted our camper up in the bucket so that we could change the tire. He even had an essential wrench which was necessary to complete the transaction. By then, it must have been 1:00 a.m. and this fine person realized we had no place to stay, so he graciously offered us his home. Just as graciously, he declined any payment for his services.

We have no idea what the name of your newspaper is, but we do know one of your finest citizens by name. He is Mr. Nig Carter, Good Samaritan. We think the people of Canyon should be proud. Mr. Carter will be one of our best vacation memories. We want to thank him again and again!

Sincerely,

Thanks for news story

Dear Mr. Donovan:

Thank you very much for the nice article which you recently published in the CANYON NEWS. The article has been responsible for bringing in several new patients. Many Canyon residents are not aware that there is a Planned Parenthood Office in Canyon so we doubly appreciate all the coverage that we can get.

Thanks again for your very nice article.

obligation issued by county commissioners for construction of a new South Amarillo courthouse annex.

Commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. Sept. 8 to discuss the budget, pay bills and conduct other business.

In other business Friday, they discussed briefly the status of a fire protection plan for rural county areas, a plan which has been pending approval by Amarillo city commissioners for several months.

Commissioner Paul Lindsey said he had met with Amarillo Asst. City Manager Jerry McGuire Thursday to discuss the fire plan, which is already in effect involving Canyon, Bushland, Happy, Umbarger and Tanglewood, and was assured the Amarillo commission will consider the proposal before a current contract runs out Oct. 1.

Commissioners discussed payment of $4500 to Amarillo for fighting five rural fires during July, but took no action. Lindsey said the county should not yet pay for four of the fires, which were on farmlands and involved wheat stubble deliberately set ablaze by landowners.

Commissioners passed a resolution calling on the Texas Highway Department to commence a study on the route for Loop 335 in Randall County. The loop is to eventually circle the City of Amarillo.

The resolution calls for the route study and for a firm commitment from the highway department on the route.

County officials have urged the route be stabilized so they can begin plans to purchase right-of-way for the loop.

Griffin reported to commissioners his recommendation that bids be sought for health and life insurance for county employees.

He reported recommendations from a committee made up of Lane Cooper, Weymon Brown and H.C. Burke, Jr., local and area insurance agents, that the bids be taken.

Current group insurance is provided by Republic National Life, which last month notified commissioners its rates would be raised substantially for county employees.

Commissioners authorized Sheriff Cliff Longest to advertise for bids for a new vehicle to replace a car involved in an accident in Amarillo recently.

They examined two subdivision plats but approved neither.

Commissioners met as a board of equalization and heard complaints on taxes from five persons.

the county permanent school fund during the past fiscal year. She said the fund has about $17,000.

Pond reported that those funds are to be distributed on a per-capita basis to each school district within the county as soon as school census figures can be obtained for the current school year.

Carnival Booth Space For Clubs

Canyon Study Club has begun making plans for the annual "Halloween Carnival" which will be held on Thursday evening, October 20.

The annual project involves numerous clubs of the community in an effort to provide entertainment on Halloween night for the city's youngsters.

Canyon Study Club annually oversees the planning of the project and arranges for booth spaces which may be rented by other clubs of the community for that evening.

In charge of booth rental arrangements for the club are Sandra McRoberts, 655-4005; Mattie Wall, 655-2070; and Judy Becknell, 655-4007. Clubs interested in securing a booth for the upcoming carnival should contact a CSC representative as soon as possible. Further information will be released as carnival plans progress.

tics of busing, additional time in staff utilization, etc., may also increase costs."

Busing costs might also be increased because the number of students riding buses would be decreased and the buses would have to run three months more than they are now running.

Transfer of students, non-summer vacations, scheduling of student extra-curricular activities, and the demand for equal offerings in every quarter, could also be major problem areas.

In addition, the report notes, it would be virtually impossible under current Texas law to set up four quarters and fit into the year schedule the holidays, teacher in-service days and other days off which are required.

Corley's report notes that there are currently no 12-month school operations in Texas.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs reported to the committee on the legality of operating high school on a double daily session with one group of students attending from 7 a.m. to noon and another group attending from noon to 5 p.m.

He said law requires that a plan for such an approach be approved by the Texas Education Agency.

Likewise, TEA approval would have to be gained for any plan to operate school on an extended day basis.

Jacobs also reported on a study made by Lloyd Welch of the school tax office on the probable tax income which would be generated from various kinds of urban housing developments.

He was asked by Committee Chairman Jay Wooten a week ago to study the funding needed to support residential areas.

Wooten's request was in response to various statements by Amarillo builders and developers that residential property will not support the tax base necessary to provide for construction of new schools.

Jacobs figures indicate that with the current tax rate and assessed valuation schedule funds generated by residential developments would not pay for the education of the children which could be expected from the developments.

But, his figures also indicate that should a full revaluation of property be accomplished in the district and should the per cent of valuation used in assessing taxes be raised to the 60 per cent level more than enough money would be generated from a residential development to provide for a child's education.

Welch, he said, figured how much tax money would be raised for a full section development which consisted of 40 acres of tax-exempt property, 10 acres of shopping center or business property, six acres of apartment complex, and 584 acres of residential property.

His figures are based on 1541 houses with an average selling price of between $55,000 and $60,000; 2016 houses with an average selling price of between $40,000 and 45,000 and 2558 houses with an average selling price of between $27,000 and $32,000.

Jacobs said about $450 per year is required from local tax sources to educate one student.

Under the current tax schedule, even the residential area consisting of $60,000 homes would not raise enough money to educate the children who could be expected to come from the area.

The committee is to meet again next Friday to consider possible recommendations concerning a building program.

Wooten indicated he would like to submit recommendations to the Canyon school board by late September.

Neighbors, Friends Gifts Honor Costleys

Neighbors and friends of Bob and Virginia Costley have held three showers for the couple since the Costley home and furnishings were destroyed in a fire August 13.

The first shower of the series was a "pounding" held by members of the Canyon Capers Square Dance Club at the club's meeting on Monday evening, August 18. Approximately 35 club members presented the couple with baskets and sacks filled with a variety of groceries at the event. Both Bob and Virginia are members of the organization which meets weekly for square dances and fellowship.

Another surprise for the Costley's was a "personal shower" held August 20 by friends and relatives of the couple at the Louis Thomas home. Assisting with the shower were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fithen, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bronniman, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Frank, and Mr. and Mrs. Tony Thomas.

At the "personal shower" approximately 60 people including out of town guests, Mr. and Mrs. Al Ackley and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bronniman of Woodward, Oklahoma, were served refreshments of coffee, punch and assorted cookies.

The Costley's were honored Tuesday evening at Canyon Community Center with a shower co-hostessed by the four Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapters in Canyon with approximately 35 persons attending. Mrs. Costley is a member of the Xi Kappa Zeta chapter which was a co-hostess for the event along with the Chi Upsilon, Alpha Theta Delta and Preceptor Gamma Chi chapters of Beta Sigma Phi sorority here.

"It is with special thanks to all these wonderful friends and family that we are on our way toward starting over after such a fire," related Mrs. Costley. "Of course we lost a number of articles in the fire that can never be replaced, but each new item from a friend has its own special meaning and sentiment for us as we begin rebuilding our lives here."

HWC Schedules Party Sept. 4

Heritage Woman's Club will be sponsoring a community wide Tupperware sales party on September 4 beginning at 7 p.m. at the Canyon Girl Scout House.

The party and fellowship is open to the public and the club's share of sales proceeds will go toward federation expenses for the coming clubyear.

Mrs. Dwight Brandt
nee Mary Longoria

Nuptial Vows Exchanged By Miss Longoria-Brandt

Miss Mary Longoria and Dwight Brandt were united in marriage Saturday evening, August 16, at the First Baptist Church in Lazbuddie, Texas with Rev. Dale Cain of Lubbock officiating at the double ring nuptial rites.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Longoria of Lazbuddie and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brandt of Umbarger.

Susan McDivitt, organist, presented traditional musical selections and accompanied Mrs. Sheila Reidel as she presented a solo vocal arrangement of The Wedding Song.

Escorted and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white linen wedding gown with a v-cut neckline trimmed by white lace. Matching lace was repeated on the edges of the short cap sleeves and complemented the hemline of the wedding gown. The bride wore a wide brimmed white hat accented with white lace and white satin ribbon. A cascade arrangement of red carnations, white baby's breath and white orchids was carried by the bride.

Mrs. Doyle Weir was the matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Cassandra Cargile and Mrs. Arelia Morris. The bridal attendants were gowned in floor length navy blue polyester knit dresses and carried bouquets of red carnations and white baby's breath.

The bridegroom's brother, Phillip Brandt, served as best man and groomsmen were Randy Farmer, a cousin of the bridegroom from Los Alamos, New Mexico, and Steve Brandt, the bridegroom's brother.

Wedding vows were exchanged before an altar decorated with matching baskets of red carnations, red gladioli and white baby's breath.

Flowergirl for the occasion was Rae Lyn Longoria, a sister of the bride. She carried a white basket filled with red and white ribbons and wore a navy blue floor length dress designed similar to those worn by the bridesmaids.

Ringbearer was Todd Albracht, cousin of the bridegroom from Bushland, who carried the wedding bands in a glass case and wore a navy blue suit.

For her daughter's marriage, the bride's mother wore a light blue polyester knit evening ensemble in floor length styling with white accents at the collar and hemline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a light blue satin floor length dress with white lace accents. Both mothers had white carnation corsages to complement their attire.

A triple tiered wedding cake decorated with white bells and lace centered the bride's table for the wedding reception which followed in fellowship hall of the church. The groom's table featured a double wedding ring cake with white frosting and white bells. Nuts, punch and coffee completed the refreshment course for the reception.

25th Anniversary Reception Is Held

Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Thomas were honored on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at a reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sims at 200 Antoine, Canyon Plaza.

Cake and punch were served about 50 guests who greeted the honored couple during the afternoon reception.

The former Maurine Cole and Delmer Thomas were married August 21, 1950 at Shamrock, Texas and have resided in Canyon since 1957. He is employed with Sid Stout Company in Amarillo and Mrs. Thomas is an employee of Gibson's in Canyon.

The couple has three children including a married daughter, Mrs. Stanley LaGrone, in Dimback, Germany and two children, Del and Patsy, of the family home.

The Kitchen Sink

BY SUSAN WILSON

We spent our vacation at home this year. There were lots of reasons, but in these days of inflation money was the biggest factor.

"Honey," Hubby began sheepishly, "I know how badly you want to get away. I figure we have just enough money to get to Estelline. That means we don't have any money for motels or food or gas to get home on. I really think we'd better stay here."

I tried to be brave in the face of this announcement but it wasn't easy.

Hubby lifted me from the kitchen floor where I had thrown myself to put my head in the oven.

"It's electric, Honey," he said, and then consoled me with promises of a truly relaxing vacation at home.

"After all," he reasoned, "traveling with three small kids really isn't a picnic."

I agreed. So I began making plans for our vacation and Hubby began making plans, too.

The trouble was our plans didn't mesh. In fact, they didn't even come close.

The first day of our "vacation," Hubby went to the library for a few hours after I cooked breakfast. I did dishes, laundry, cleaned house and tended the kids.

After I cooked lunch, Hubby read a new book. I did dishes, laundry, cleaned house and tended the kids.

After I cooked supper, Hubby propped his feet up to watch television. I did dishes, laundry, cleaned house and tended the kids.

"Fix me a Coke, will you?" he shouted from the living room while I put up left-overs. "Isn't this great? I told you a vacation at home could be fun."

Yeah, sure, I said to myself as I leaned over the kitchen sink with the serrated edge of the potato peeler poised against my wrist.

Day two, I decided to assert myself. Hubby went out for donuts for breakfast. I bought a bunch of paper plates so I wouldn't be doing dishes constantly. It started to become apparent that our plans for a wonderful vacation at home clashed.

I really had imagined that with one week at home we could paint the bathroom. Hubby figured he could read three books. I thought we could clean up the back porch. Hubby wanted to take long walks. I thought we could work in the yard. Hubby wanted to sit in it.

That kind of stuff isn't Hubby's idea of fun and relaxation. And, our ideas of a vacation weren't too fun for the kids, either.

It was obvious we had to reach a compromise.

So, we ate several meals out and took the kids to fun places.

But, it wasn't the same. Every time I washed a load of sheets, my mind drifted to motels where you don't have to do sheets or towels.

And, as I cooked the meals and washed dishes, I dreamed of lucious meals cooked in a spotless restaurant kitchen and served with the greatest care. I longed to get up from a table and leave the dishes behind. I wanted not to worry about running out of clean glasses or ice or patience.

I needed a vacation, I told myself. A real vacation.

Like last year, I reminisced.

It was August (dreadfully hot and our car isn't air conditioned). Hubby had hay fever. I was about three months pregnant and I had morning sickness even in the evening.

D'Arcy was 4½ and Julie was just one and they both developed severe and simultaneous cases of diarrhea as soon as we left the city limits.

What a lovely trip.

Sightseeing consisted of private tours of all the gas station bathrooms between here and Houston. Meals consisted of saltine crackers.

I don't think I slept during the whole 10 days we were gone. Hubby sniffed and blew his nose incessantly and the kids wanted to camp out in the bathroom.

This is what I dream of?

Looking back, this year's vacation seems almost wonderful.
